

no-where to go but where the sea laps the shore. Though I could not dive in, I could not walk a-way; just in case I heard my name called u-pon the breeze Wai - ting wai - ting for you.

Wai - ting, wai - ting for you. I've been wai-ting for at least half a life; why does it take this long? Been hum-ming a tune but no one could show me the words to the song. Mm

Mm Mm Mm

You're eyes they speak to me be - yond what a-ny words could say.

They show me I'm a-live here to day, that you trust me and you won't go a-way.

Then I reach and touch your face; now a light sur-rounds this space.

And you know who I am: not per - fect but wor - thy of all the love you have to give. Now af - ter a life - time of so ma - ny questions an - swered "No," here is one e - ter - nal "Yes". The time came. Our names were called. We fi - nally heard. Wai - ting, wai - ting for you. While you were wai - ting, wai - ting for me too.
